On July 13, 2007, the Court issued an Order to Show Cause Why Subpoena Should Not Be Determined to be Defective and Unenforceable, which ordered Plaintiff AT&T Capital Services, Inc. ("Plaintiff") to show cause why the Court should not determine a subpoena issued by counsel for Plaintiff to California Bank & Trust to be defective on its face and unenforceable for not being issued out of the proper district court. [Doc. No. 2.] The Court did not receive a memorandum of points and authorities from any of the parties in the case or from Ultra Imaging Solutions, whose motion for protective order initiated the instant action in this Court.

1 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

2 1. The subpoena issued by Plaintiff out of the United
3 States District Court, Southern District of California to 4 California Bank & Trust, located in Los Angeles, California, is
5 DEFECTIVE and UNENFORCEABLE. Based on the information before the 6 Court, the subpoena should have issued from the United States
7 District Court, Central District of California.

8 2. The Clerk of Court shall close the court file.

9 IT IS SO ORDERED.
